FROUDE FAMILY.

“ We find the race numerous and active and settled chiefly about Kingston and Modbury, where in the year of Culloden, RICHARD HURRELL, Gentleman, was Married to Mistress PHILLIS COLLINGS.

“ Their daughter, PHILLIS HURRELL, became the wife of ROBERT FROUD of Walkhampton, 3rd son of JOHN, to whom descended the Modbury Manors of Edmestone and Gutsford ; these two lived at Aveton Giffard, and are buried there in the Parish Church, where their Monuments still exist.

“ ‘ ROBERT FROUD,’ Armiger, died young, four years after his marriage (in 1770), which had for issue one son and three daughters.

“ PHILLIS, the widow, a person of strong character, lived on for 66 years longer and saw the grave opened, or opening, for nearly all her brilliant and fated grandchildren.

“ Her children, left fatherless in 1770, were MARY, MARGARET, and ELIZABETH, her son ROBERT HURRELL was a posthumous child.

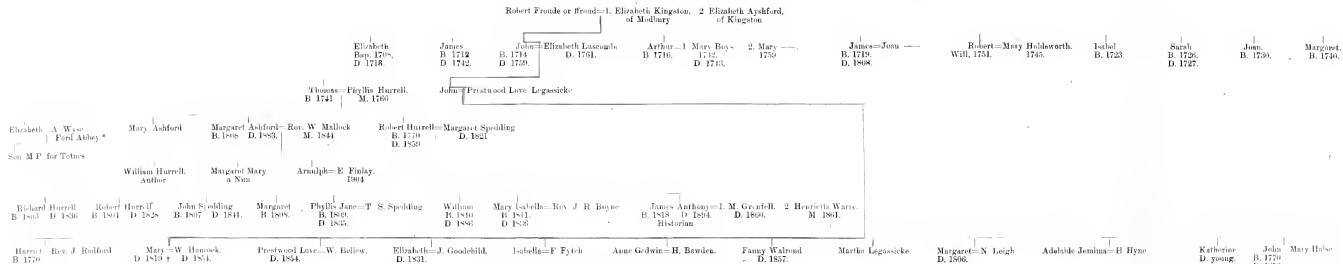

“ The latter was to rise to more than local eminence, known throughout an exceptionally long life as Rector of Dartington and Arch-deacon of Totnes. He came from Denbury, of which he was already Incumbent, to his new Parish at Dartington in 1799.” Died 1859.

From a paper on the Froudes, or Frowdes, of Devon, in the Reports and Transactions of the Devonshire Association, 1892, by the Rev. R. E. Renfell.

RHODES OF BELLAIR AND SHOPWICK.

Maternal Ancestors of PHILLIS FROUDE.
Lineage.

AMBROSE RHODES, son of BLANCHE HAMLYN and JOHN RHODES, who, in strong presumptive evidence, is supposed to have been identical with JOHN RHODES, of Horbury, the disinherited son of JOHN RHODES, Knight, of Barborough, was educated at Wurtenburg, and took the Degree of M.D., 1638, but was imprisoned for political reasons and died in prison. His son, AMBROSE RHODES, came to England and took possession of a small patrimony at Modbury and practised as a Physician. He died in 1684. He married, first, ELIZABETH BAKER, in 1663, and, second, JULIANA PRESTWOOD, in 1667, daughter of THOMAS PRESTWOOD, and left one son and one daughter.

1, AMBROSE. 2, ALICE, who married R. COLLINS, of Modbury, and had an only daughter, PHILLIS.

PHILLIS COLLINS married R. HURRELL, of Totnes, in 1745, and left one daughter, PHILLIS, who married THOMAS FROUDE, and was mother of Archdeacon ROBERT HURRELL FROUDE, ELIZABETH and MARGARET FROUDE. They were grandparents of the Historian FROUDE, who died in 1894.

The name is probably derived from a place in Kent called Frode, which existed in the 13th century. The place-name Frode dated back probably to British times. In the Celtic language Ffrwd signifies a rushing stream.

A remarkable branch of the family was distinguished in the Parliamentary Wars, and afterwards in the reigns of Charles II., James II., Anne, and the early Georges.

In Bath Abbey Church there is a mural monument to the memory of Sir Philip Frowde, Kt., who died August 6th, 1647, leaving four sons and one daughter by his second wife, Margaret, daughter of Sir John Brian O'Neile, and, by his third wife, daughter of Sir John Ashburnham, also Margaret. He had a Lease of the Post Office. Philip was born in 1648, succeeded him, and became Postmaster-General. Was Colonel Philip Frowde. His son, Philip, was a pupil and friend of Addison's.

In the reign of Elizabeth there were Frowdes in Wilts, and, earlier still, a John Frode was connected, as a Clerk in Holy Orders, both with Somerset and Devon. In 27th Henry VIII., the Rectory of Heytesbury was held by Edward Frode, who also held the Rectory of Saint Edmund's, Salisbury, in 1663. This same Edward Frode appears to have been the founder of the Frowd's Almshouses in Bedwin Street, Salisbury, still existing, and his portrait still hangs in the Vestry of Saint Edmund's Church. In 1783, Susan, second daughter of James Frowde, Esquire, of Knoyle, Wilts, married Edward Pellew, first Lord Exmouth.

Copied from Bible belonging to MARTHA LEGASSICKE FROUDE, now in the possession of ROBERT COARD TUCKER, of Ashburton, who was her Residuary Legatee. (1832 date of Bible).

“FRANCES WALROND (7th daughter), died February 2nd, 1857, and was buried in the old vault at Knowstone Church, aged 75 years.

“1803.—The Froude family Estate is Edmestone in Modbury and Kingston, of earlier date, and later, Buckland.

“The Rev. JOHN FROUDE, Vicar of Knowstone and Molland, died September 6th, 1803, and was buried at Knowstone.”

LEGASSICKE OF MODBURY,

From whom, first, JOHN (of whom presently); second, a daughter, who married Admiral GIDWIN; and third, GEORGE, who died unmarried.

JOHN, eldest son, married — ASHWEEKE, and had five children.

1. JAMES, Surgeon in the Royal Navy, drowned at sea (lost in the "Glorieux," September 22nd, 1782).*
2. HARRY, of Ringwood, near Modbury, died unmarried.
3. MARY, married Captain CRESPIN, R.N.
4. PRESTWOOD LOVE, married the Rev. JOHN FROUDE.
5. BETSY, married Mr. PAINTING. (?)

These three daughters became co-heiresses and representatives of the family of Legassicke by the death of their uncle, George, and their two brothers, James and Harry, who died unmarried.

A member of the Legassicke family still lives at Lympstone, Miss Susan Legassicke Perring. The Perrings were originally a Modbury family. Miss Perring is a daughter of Sir Philip Perring, who died in 1866.

* Prestwood Love Legassicke, then Mrs. John Froude, was staying at Mr. Hancock's, at Ford, at the time her brother James was drowned, some months before his death was heard of, and she dreamt that she saw him clinging to a spar with drenched hair and on the point of sinking. This dream proved to have occurred on the night of his death.

A memorial gold ring came to the possession of L.M.S. of James Legassicke, who has given it to her eldest daughter, L. M. Carver. The inscription on the ring is "James Legassicke, Surgeon, lost in the Glorieux, Sep. 22nd, 1782."

The "Glorieux" was one of the French ships captured by Lord Rodney, Admiral, when he conquered the West Indies in 1781.

Prestwood of North Huish.—George Prestwood, whose daughter, Elizabeth, married Ambrose Rhodes, of Modbury, in 1703, is mentioned in Prince's "Worthies of Devon" as "George Prestwood, Sheriff of the County, 1692, whose ancestor several generations back transplanted himself from Worcestershire, where the present gentleman possesses still a fair paternal Estate."

My great-grandmother, Mrs. John Froude, formerly Prestwood Love Legassicke, was at a ball at Exeter when she met a gentleman who paid her great attention and danced much with her. He became so enamoured of her that at the end of the evening he made her a proposal of marriage. She told him she could not accept the offer, though much flattered by it, and, upon his pressing his suit, she said she had twelve objections to him. On his inquiring if they could not be removed, she invited him to call the following morning, when she would tell him what they were. He did so, and was introduced to her husband and eleven children! (L.M.S.)

BELLEW.

(From Burke's Herald's Visitations, circa 1860 ?)

“Stockleigh Court, Devon, is the seat of John Prestwood Bellew, Esquire, the representative of one of the oldest families in the Kingdom, derived by direct male descent from the Norman De Bellaire, or De Bella Acqua, whose name appears in the Roll of Battle Abbey. At an early period a line became established in Ireland, and in the time of Edward IV., John Bellewe, of Bellewstown, marrying the co-heiress of Fleming, of Bratton Fleming, acquired a considerable Estate in Devonshire and founded the family, which continued to live at Ash Rogers in that Shire until the reign of Elizabeth, when William Bellew, father of the first possessor of Stockleigh Court, joined with his eldest son, Richard (who afterwards moved into Lincolnshire) in alienating Ash to the Earl of Bath. The old Mansion at Stockleigh Court was pulled down, and a new building erected on its site by the late William Bellew, Esq., father of the present possessor,” John Bellew (1860).

The name of “Petronella” occurs in the Wiveliscombe Register. John Hancock who lived at Ford, in 1795, used a seal on which were the Arms described on the first quarterings alone, and the Crest, a demi Griffin, erased.

She married, secondly, Thomas Ivatt, His Majesty's Principal Searcher in the Port of London, at whose cost this monument was erected. She had issue by him Thomas and Judith Ivatt. She departed this life March 28, 1634, aged 26."

"Grace, meekness, love, religion, modesty,

Seemed in this mirror of her sex to die ;

For her soul's lover, in her life did give

To her, as many virtues as could live,

And this bestowed by Heavenly art,

Earth claimed her body, Heaven her better part."

Judith Hancock (afterwards Ivatt) was originally named Newman, and she was the daughter of — Newman, a London Goldsmith.

The remains of a Park and Mansion formerly existed between Combe Martin Rectory and the Church. The Manor was bought by William Hancock, of Lord Martin, in the reign of Henry VIII., and passed out of the family through an heiress, who married Admiral Sir Charles Waager. (?) Thence to a daughter who married Sir William Watson, who left three daughters, who still own the Manor. (1898).

Lady Watson lived at Combe Martin until her death, which occurred during the recollection of the present Vicar, Rev.W. Jones (1898).

* On a handsome black marble and gilt monument in Torrington Church, Devon, is the following inscription :—

“Memoria sacrum

 Gentleman, who died 27th day of

* This Judith is probably niece of William and Judith Hancock.—L.M.S.

E.P.S. and L.M.S. were at Torrington in 1900, going there for the day in order to visit the place in which E.P.S.'s father, Robert Squarey, lived as a young man before he came to Salisbury. Visiting the Church they found this monument, also one to the Vicary family, which, unfortunately, L.M.S. did not copy.

* My grandparents, William and Mary Hancock above, were at a sale of furniture in the neighbourhood of Wiveliscombe, in the village of Langford, when he took up a pistol which was lying on one of the tables. It was, unfortunately, loaded, and went off. The bullet penetrated the lung of my grandmother, and in a few days afterwards she died. My aunt, Mary Ann Bellew, has told me that she and my mother were staying at Ashburton with their grandmother, Mrs. Froude, when the news of the accident came. They were taken home to Wiveliscombe, and she remembers having been taken to her mother's room and seeing her there very ill. The accident took place on February 27th, and she died March 22nd, 1819.—L.M.S.

† My mother, Lavinia, was married to Robert Tucker in 1828 by the celebrated Rev. HANCOCK,

Extract from "The Times" newspaper, August 8th, 1904 :—

"The King has sent his congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Crocker,* of Mount Nebo, Taunton, who recently celebrated the 70th anniversary of their wedding day, surrounded by all their children now living—one having come from Australia for the event—and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Both the old people, whose united ages total nearly 188 years, are hale and hearty. They were born and have lived in Somerset almost the whole of their lives."

Extract from "St. James's Gazette," July, 1903 :—

"DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

"The signatures to the Declaration of American Independence, which has just been ordered by a Committee to be kept under lock and key in a great fire and light-proof safe, are now scarcely legible, although the text can still be read. Only one or two of the signatures can be made out. There is only a trace of the autograph of John Hancock, the first to sign. The Committee, equipped with powerful microscopes, made a careful examination of the Declaration. It was found that the ink used was not of the first quality. The fact that the engrosser (now unknown to history) used a sharp pen and bore steadily on it accounted, in a measure, for the better preservation of the text as compared with the signatures. The great damage sustained, however, was in 1820, when a copy was taken by the crude letterpress process."

* My great-grandmother was Mary Crocker. She married Philip Hancock, who was born in 1739.—L.M.S.

Before signing the Declaration of Independence, it is reported that John Hancock remarked to Alexander Hamilton, "We must all hang together," and that he replied, "Yes, or we shall all be hanged separately."

Mrs. N. H. G. H.*

“Father remarked on the strong likeness between me and the picture of his father.* That picture used to hang in his Grandmother Pitts’ room. He remembered it 65 years ago ; it was painted at Florence. His father was a short man. He was engaged in Newfoundland trade, sailing his own ships there, where he took in a cargo of fish, took it to the West Indies, Spain, or Portugal, and returned thence to England with fruits, &c.

“His Grandmother Pitts died in 1792, aged 90, when father was 12 years old. Her maiden name was Bickford—a tall old woman, white hair, retained all her faculties, used to go to Church (at Teignmouth) every Sunday in a Sedan chair, which father walked by the side of. Recollects hearing her say how, in her school days, she had once taken eight potatoes to her Mistress as a present, then a very great rarity. Her husband, Elias Pitts, of Teignmouth, died many years before her. He died suddenly whilst on the Grand Jury at Exeter, going up the steps to the Castle. The old china in the little room at Coombe was her Wedding China.† “Old Stephen Tucker, of Teignmouth, great grandfather to Robert Tucker, of Ashburton, father remembers well. William Tucker, his son, was a Newfoundland merchant. Andrew Griffin Coard, and William, were William’s two sons, who lived with their grandfather, Stephen, whilst their father was on his voyages. They were playfellows of my father, and used to shoot together, and keep rabbits, &c. Old Stephen used to sit before the fire with a cocked hat on, and went to bed at nine. Boys, wishing to get him to bed, used to put the clock on an hour, and then tell him how late it was. When he was gone, they sat up and picked and roasted the birds they had shot by a string in front of the fire. Sometimes they would coax him for a shilling, and if he refused, they got a kettle and drummed it with a stick in his ears until he consented. Of these boys, William became a sailor, was taken prisoner by the French, and compelled to sleep every night with a lunatic in a place so low that they could not sit upright. He was taken to a Spanish port, was soon exchanged, walked through Spain with a sable fox skin for father's sister, Maria Tucker, and his sister-in-law, over his shoulder. He afterwards sailed from Newfoundland, and the ship was never heard of.

“Andrew Griffin Coard became an Attorney, practised at Ashburton, and built the house there. Married, first, Maria Pitts Squarey, father's sister, very talented. Died in London, after his second wife's death, and is buried at the Savoy Churchyard, Strand.”

† Note — On the day of the receipt of the news of the Battle of Waterloo, June 1815, my father and grandfather had ridden to Exeter—twenty miles. On hearing the news my grandfather bade my father—then just thirteen years old—to ride back to Ashburton immediately, quickly. He did so, and spread the news through the towns and hamlets he passed on his twenty-mile ride, and galloped through the streets of Ashburton crying out the good news. The excitement was tremendous, of course, and the crowd tried to dismount him from his pony and chair him shoulder high. "Let us chair Master Robert," they said. I have heard my father tell the story, and add, "I gave a good cut to my pony and galloped home."—L.M.S.

He took his ships to Newfoundland for a cargo of salt fish, and from thence to Spain for fruits, &c. During the French War* he was taken prisoner with his ship, and passing Dartmouth Harbour he prayed one of the French officers to allow him to waive his handkerchief out of the port-hole of his cabin in which he was confined, in order to attract the attention of the authorities on land, offering his gold sleeve links as a bribe for conferring this favour. It was, of course, refused. Arriving in France, he was chained to a lunatic in a cell so low that they could not stand upright. His sufferings were great, but at length he was released on parole, before being exchanged. He there met a lady who fell in love with him, but this was not returned. On reaching Devon safely, he continued his life of seamanship and merchandise. Many years after, being in Spain, he again came across the lady he had

* It is interesting here to relate that during this war many French officers were confined in Dartmoor prison. On hearing he had a wife in Devon, she loaded him with gifts for her, and among them were some valuable silks and brocades which are still in our family. This William Tucker was afterwards lost at sea on his voyage from Newfoundland.
